Tissot has been involved in sports for a long time. However, we always wanted to be more than just a sponsor; Tissot wanted to be a part of the game by doing what it does best – timekeeping.

In addition to being a natural vector for communication, reaching a large number of people through an exciting and emotional medium, timekeeping is also a way to stay on top in terms of technology. As sports evolve, so do we. Tissot strives for better performance, dedicating itself to the search for new technologies in order to deliver more accurate results every time it steps into the sporting arena.

Thanks to this dedication, Tissot is now a trusted Official Timekeeper and partner of many of the most important sporting events around the world.

Tissot's innovative and dynamic side is reflected through its love of motorsport. Illustrating this passion are Jorge Lorenzo, MotoGP rider, as well as Bradley Smith, Stefan Bradl and Tito Rabat, Swiss Moto2 rider, Thomas Lüthi, and Nicky Hayden, FIM World Superbike rider.

Representing Tissot's team spirit and strategic mind are Tony Parker, who represents basketball in the ambassador team, and Virat Kohli, an international cricketer.

In the highly communicative world of film and television, a performance of a totally different kind is personified in the Tissot ambassador family by the actors Liu Yifei and Huang Xiaoming, who share the profound value for tradition with a modern touch.

Tissot further fortifies the bond with its clients through these amazing individuals who share the brand's dynamism and fighting spirit and who make the brand accessible.
